

This elegant kitchen in a newly built home on Philadelphia's Main Line was designed to be a highly functional kitchen for a family of five as well as possess the character, details and style of a traditional Main Line manor house. The island and cabinetry near the cooktop were designed to accommodate the homeowner's passion for cooking and baking. A prep sink and generous storage for all manner of kitchen paraphernalia was included. At the opposite end, the island houses a pop-up mixer lift, bakeware storage and bins for flour, sugar, etc. The tall wall houses larger appliances and provides extra storage in the upper cabinets, adding to the intrinsic style of the built-in cabinetry look.
